

<http://raforum.site/spip.php?article5147>

SARTWELL, Crispin. " An Anarchism: American Utopias and Josiah Warren

- Research on Anarchism - History: Anarchism and Anarchists Yesterday and Today - Bio-Bibliographies - WARREN, Josiah (1798-1874)
Musician, Inventor, Social Philosopher, Founder of American individualist anarchism -

Date de mise en ligne : Thursday 16 October 2008

Copyright © RAForum - All rights reserved

Crispin Sartwell was born 6.20.58 in DC. His Dad (and his and his) were DC newspapermen. His Mom and Step-pa were high school teachers and later organic farmers. He got kicked out of the public school system in tenth grade for fomenting revolution, and attended the New Education Project, aka Bonzo Ragamuffin Prep, then U Maryland, Johns Hopkins, UVA. He worked as a copy boy in 1980-81 at the Washington Star, where he started writing about pop music. He was a freelance rock critic through the eighties for, among others the Balt City Paper, Record Mag, High Fidelity, and Melody Maker.

He lives in Glen Rock, PA with his wife, the writer Marion Winik, and their five children. He's Visiting Associate Prof of Political Science at Dickinson College. He writes a weekly op-ed column, distributed by Creators Syndicate. He has also appeared in Harper's, the Washington Post, and on Weekend All Things Considered.

He (or perhaps I) is the author and editor of a number of books, and he's taught philosophy and communications at Vanderbilt, the University of Alabama, and Penn State Harrisburg.

Source